THE TASTY TALE OF KOREAN-CHINESE CUISINE

Korean-Chinese cuisine, known as "Junghwa Yori", is a unique fusion of Chinese flavours adapted to Korean tastes. It became popular in Korea during the 19th century, when Chinese immigrants, mainly from the Shandong region, introduced dishes like Jajangmyeon (noodles with black bean sauce), Tangsuyuk (sweet and sour pork), and Jjamppong (spicy seafood noodle soup).

One fun fact: Jajangmyeon is so beloved that Koreans celebrate "Black Day" on April 14th, when singles eat this dish to commiserate their single status. Over time, Korean-Chinese food evolved into a comforting staple, enjoyed by all!
